

Foster Care Q3 Impact Report

60%

of animals in our
care were in foster
homes, on average

Socializing Peanut and Jona

Peanut and Jona are two rats that displayed undersocial behaviours. They were both sent to a loving, experienced foster home to help them build their confidence.

They flourished in their foster home – and we're happy to share that they were adopted together! Small species greatly benefit from foster homes because of the extra enrichment time, more out of cage space, and one-on-one time with humans.

Tour Life with Roo

Roo was transferred into our care as a stray puppy. Steve-O, actor and animal advocate, was looking to adopt a dog to tour with him and decided to foster Roo to see if he'd be comfortable with the on-the-road lifestyle. But after Steve-O posted Roo in one of his YouTube videos, Steve-O found the perfect home for Roo and he was adopted in just a few days.

Helping Jaggery Feel Better

Jaggery was living in a foster home while she waited to be adopted. Unfortunately she developed a concern with her eye and was brought back to see a Toronto Humane Society vet to monitor her eye. She received medication and was sent back to her foster home to recover.

After a few weeks, Jaggery was back to her normal self, playing with her foster cat friend. She is currently available for adoption.

114

days is the average length of stay of adoption track animals

8

days is average wait time for animals to get into a foster home